Community unites to declare: 'Get drugs off our Rez!'

By Micheal Rios

Over 300 hopeful community members united on a Friday evening to bring awareness to Tulalip's drug epidemic. With a positive outlook and emphasis on prevention, the Get Drugs Off Our Rez walk offered traditional songs, prayer, and stories of encouragement.

In what is sure to be one of the last warmer days of the year, the rain and clouds stayed away on September 27, giving a picturesque backdrop to the gathering as family and friends assembled at Heritage

High School's gymnasium. After many formed a large circle and shared four songs to honor the four directions, the assembly marched their powerful drum beats and strong voices down 27th Ave. NE, or what is colloquially called 'the Quil.'

“Today’s purpose was to raise awareness for all of our youth, our elders, and all of our community members. To recognize that there really is unity out here and our people are ready to come together and stay together to build a stronger future,” explained prevention walk coordinator Josh Fryberg.

“Personally, I’ve lost family members to the drug epidemic and have other family who are addicted.

“My goal is to get them stronger and get them to where they need to be in order to beat their addictions,” continued Josh. “It comes full circle because by helping those that need our support the most,

it shows our youth we still practice our traditional teachings and care for one another.”

Local law enforcement, firefighters, and various Tulalip-based programs came together with the outpouring of community support to form one unified demonstration. Tulalip tribal members of all ages participated and showed their support for a shared mission by wearing a black t-shirt that stated with all capital letters: GET DRUGS OFF OUR REZ. As they marched down the Quil many local commuters cheered from their cars, while others stood outside their residence to take in the awe-inspiring scene.

Walking their talk. Voices from the march:

Jobey Williams.

“Our ancestors fought for us. They fought for us to have what we have today, and to see so many gather here today to get our people clean means a lot. It shows we’re still willing to fight for one another and get our people together on the right path so we can walk as one. This is just the start, only the beginning, but we are going to get our people back. We are going to help the ones suffering and get them back in the sacred circle.”

Gerald Williams Jr., with his son Gerald Williams III, celebrated graduation from Wellness Court.

“Two years ago I was really bad into my addiction. I weighed something like 110 pounds and using so much drugs that they nearly killed me,” shared Gerald. “Next thing you know my son was born and reality set in that I needed to get clean for him.

“My father was an alcoholic and his addiction killed him when I was young. I didn’t want my son growing up with that same story so I set out to get clean. It was a struggle and wasn’t easy at all. I had to go through treatment two times to get it right, but eventually it stuck and now I can show my son a better way to live. I’m really grateful for Wellness Court and everyone who helped me get here today.”

16-year-old Kisar Moses, youth council representative.

“When it comes to the drug epidemic, I’ve seen a whole lot and heard much more about what it has done to us. Drugs are keeping us to the sins and vices of the Earth. We need to separate ourselves from that because our ancestors wanted us to be pure and to keep our teachings alive. Our teachings aren’t heroin needles or alcohol.

“Drugs, alcohol, cigarettes, vaping...all of that is like a snake. You never want to pick up the snake because it will bite you and coil around you, preventing you from being on the good path and walking the sacred road.”

Tulalip Bay Firefighters Peter VanLunsen and Dane Zirwas

“It really empowers us and gives us great pride to serve the community. We often have to respond to not favorable situations, but being here today with the community is a tremendous opportunity.”

Benjamin Deen walked alongside his mother as they both celebrated being clean and sober.

“This is so big for our community. This walk is for the future of our children and young ones. I’m carrying my N.A. chips because they remind me that this process is one day at a time. So far I’ve earned my 30-day, 60-day, 90-day, 6-month, 9-month,

1-year and 18-month chips.”

Donald ‘Penoke’ Hatch, Tulalip elder

“When we say drug epidemic we are referring to the heroin, opioid-based pain pills, and cocaine that is sold to our people. It’s poison. The whole community has to help out to solve this problem. If you see things in the neighborhoods, next door, or in your own house, then you have to be willing to talk about it and call the police.

“I worked hard with one of my children and still lost him, so I know how difficult it can be. Drugs and being addicts isn’t the traditional lifestyle of us as Native Americans. And in order to rid our reservation of those things we have to be willing to speak up and tell on those up to no good. If we’re not willing to do that, then we will continue to have drugs on our reservation. It takes the whole community being on the same page to end this epidemic.”

Tulalip's own Malana Richwine crowned Miss Washington

By Micheal Rios

Ten-year-old Malana Richwine, daughter of Alonzo and Nickie Richwine, earned the prestigious title of 2019 National American Miss Washington. During the first week of September, the regal Tulalip tribal member competed against 55 other determined girls for the highly coveted Miss Washington crown.

As a result of her victory, she will be attending the National Pageant to be held in Anaheim, California at Disneyland during Thanksgiving week. While representing the great state of Washington, Malana will have the opportunity to win her share of over $500,000 in cash and prizes.

The National American Miss Pageants are dedicated to celebrating American's greatness and encouraging its future leaders. Each year, the National American Miss Pageants awards 1.5 million dollars in cash, scholarships, and prizes to recognize and assist the development of young women nationwide. Pageants are held in each state for girls ages four to eighteen in five different age divisions.

The pageant program is based on inner beauty, as well as poise, presentation, and offers an "All American Spirit" of fun for family and friends. Emphasis is placed on the importance of gaining self-confidence, learning new skills, learning good attitudes about competition, and setting and achieving personal goals.

Malana's pageant portfolio is filled with an extensive list of skills honed and community service projects completed. She's overcome a commonly held fear of public speaking to the point she can talk in a strong and confident voice in front of hundreds of people. Her activities include acrobatic dance, starting point-guard on her basketball team, dancing in local and regional Pow-Wows, and spending as much time with her family as possible.

Malana is always looking for new ways to give back to her Marysville/Tulalip community. To date she has volunteered with the Wounded Warriors Project, provided hot meals and warm blankets to the homeless, and been an avid supporter of Leah's Dream Foundation. Her platform for community service and volunteer work has taught her not to take the simple luxuries of life for granted.

Still celebrating her crowning achievement on September 26, Malana was invited to sit down with Marysville Mayor Jon Nehring. During the meeting he got to share in the young tribal member's unbridled enthusiasm as they watched video highlights from her pageant win.

"The first thing I noticed about her is how poised and confident she is, which is really rare for somebody her age," said Mayor Nehring. "That just shows how these types of programs expose children to the fun of winning competitions while building life skills that will benefit her for the rest of her life. She is somebody that will be a future leader in our community."

"It's so exciting being able to meet the Mayor," added Malana. "He told me what a great representative I am for the city and how proud he was to meet someone my age with a passion for volunteer work. Winning Miss Washington only makes me dream more and more of one day being Miss USA or even Miss Universe."

Malana could not have come this far in pageantry without the many friends, family members, and sponsors who have contributed to make her dreams a reality. She said she is very thankful for all the generous members of her Tulalip tribal community and hopes to see them at her upcoming fundraising event on October 18 at the Creamery Co. Frozen Yogurt Shoppe in Marysville.

Return of the Salmon

City of Sultan celebrates Indigenous culture

By Kalvin Valdillez

Approximately 25 miles east of the Tulalip Reservation is the city of Sultan, located exactly at the confluence of the Skykomish and Sultan rivers. After the search of gold brought many settlers to the area, the town decided to pay respect to the chief of the Skykomish at the time by naming the city in his honor, T'seul-Ted, or Sultan spelled out phonetically.

A man of many relations, Chief T'seul-Ted, locally known as Sultan John, had ties to Tribal nations throughout the region, was highly-respected amongst Salish people, and known for his work as a healer. If you're an outdoor recreational enthusiasts and spend your winters skiing and snowboarding at Stevens Pass, you may have seen Chief T'seul-Ted fishing along Highway 2 as you entered the city, or the 13-foot wooden statue built in his likeness. Every year, for the past eight years, the town gathers at Osprey Park to celebrate Chief T'seul-Ted's legacy as well as Indigenous culture at the Return of the Salmon Celebration.

A little rain didn't prevent the Sultan community from coming out for some family fun time at Osprey Park on the morning of September 28. Since the Washington autumn weather is unpredictable, the daylong event saw a mixture of precipitation and sun rays through the duration of the celebration. Luckily, the majority of the festivities took place under a covered basketball court, allowing the people to stay dry while they feasted on frybread and salmon caesar salads.

"This is our eighth year," exclaimed Mars Miller, Return of the Salmon Celebration committee member. "It started with Matthew War Bonnet (Lakota), wanting to honor Chief T'seul-Ted as the namesake of Sultan because it often gets lost. This celebration is our way to honor Chief T'seul-Ted and bring back the real history of our area and honor the Native people of the Northwest."

It's important to note that along with honoring Chief T'seul-Ted, the community is also commemorating the restoration of the local salmon habitat. The Tulalip Tribes dedicated time, funds and efforts to remove and manage a series of dams, clean up debris and restore riverbeds along the Sultan and Skykomish Rivers for spawning salmon.

The Return of the Salmon Celebration is a way for locals to learn about the salmon habitat. The city enlists a number of local non-profit organizations, such as Sound Salmon Solutions, to help raise awareness and educate attendees about current recovery efforts taking place around the state. Snohomish County PUD hosts guided tours of the rivers for festival goers to show the environmental work they are doing, monitoring the river's water quality, temperature and flow.

Every half-hour a horse drawn carriage arrived at the park, picking up those celebrating the return of the salmon and transporting them a few blocks to the Sultan high school. Once at the school, they received a first-hand look at how the students are making strong efforts with Coho salmon recovery.

"Sultan high school has one of the only hatcheries at a school in the state, maybe the whole country," said Mars. "We are thankful to Tulalip who offers support through a grant to keep that work going because it's an important opportunity for students to get hands-on experience and learn how to take care of the salmon. And who knows, hopefully from that program some students will find a career path and develop a passion for fisheries."

Among the vendors selling jewelry, salves and native artwork, sat Tulalip's own Taylor Family Basket Weaving. Tribal members Lance and Tammy held a live weaving demonstration that sparked plenty of interest as onlookers watched the couple work their magic, turning strips of cedar into baskets.

"This our fourth year and we just love this event," Tammy stated. "Usually we don't travel outside our Native community of Tulalip, but we enjoy being here. It's a great way to honor the salmon and the Indigenous culture in the Sultan area. We like visiting and hearing stories

Following the celebration, guests were asked to meet at Traveler’s Park, located off of Highway 2, for a special unveiling. A large boulder was positioned facing the highway and painted on its front was decorated war hero and proud Tulalip tribal member, Sam Wold Jr. Sam served in the Army during World War II, where he received two purple hearts, a silver star and a bronze star for his service. Sam’s medals, gear and uniform are on display at the Hibulb Cultural Center.

Sam passed away at the age of 81 in 2006. A lifelong local of Sultan, the city submitted an application to the 50 State Freedom Rock Tour, an event created by artist Ray ‘Bubba’ Sorensen II. Initially, Bubba began the project in his home state of Iowa, painting a large boulder to pay tribute to the United States Veterans. Each year, Bubba has painted a new image on the rock to commemorate Memorial Day, dedicating the rest of the year to painting one boulder to honor a veteran in every state. This year’s Washington State freedom rock dedication to Sam was sure to include his Salish roots, as Bubba incorporated the Tulalip killer whale into the painting.

“It was amazing to experience that ceremony and witness that honoring,” said Tribal member Sarah Jean Hart. “To see a Tulalip tribal member honored that way was beautiful and absolutely amazing.”

The 9th Annual Return of the Salmon Celebration will take place on September 26, 2020. For more information, please contact event chairperson, Craig Young for additional information at (425) 359-8936.

from the local community who talk about their great grandparents and their lineage. We love the medicine that happens here. We love seeing people enjoy our gift and we love teaching, especially the young kids. Giving back is why we’re here, it’s our duty, we need to let our people know why we do this.”

A highlight for the kiddos was visiting the arts and crafts station by Skykomish Valley Indian Education. Incorporating the culture of the Snohomish people, the art activities included beading necklaces and bracelets as well as painting cedar salmon blocks.

The entertainment for the day included performances by Lummi violinist Swil Kanim, Native American flutist Paul Nyenhuis as well as a mini powwow with beats provided by War Bonnet Drum, a group led by Tulalip tribal member, Don Carpenter.

“It’s our first time here, it’s neat,” said Tulalip Elder, Virginia Carpenter. “My son is drumming here today. It’s a real good event for the kids and a great way to share our culture and get our people together.”

Lady Hawks no match for Lopez, rebound for win over Muckleshoot

By Micheal Rios

After winning their season opener against Lummi, the Heritage Lady Hawks (1-0) played two consecutive matches against the Lopez Lobos. The first was away on September 20 and at home on September 23.

In both the home and away games versus Lopez, Tulalip lost in straight sets 0-3. Both occasions played out eerily the same with Tulalip showing flashes of high quality play, but ultimately not being able to sustain it over a whole match. Lopez presented the Lady Hawks their biggest challenge of the early season, as the Lobos are projected to be a top 3 team in the Northwest 1B division.

The Lady Hawks did their best to learn from key mistakes made against Lopez and turned their attention to fellow tribal school Muckleshoot. The two tribal teams played on September 25 at Francy J. Sheldon gymnasium.

In the 1st game, the Lady Hawks jumped out to an 8-4 lead before going on a 12-0 scoring barrage. Leading 20-4 the girls closed out strong and won the opening game 25-8. Tulalip continued to look good in the 2nd game. Their service game was strong and they weren't committing many unforced errors. Up 16-11, junior Krislyn Parks served multiple aces while her team scored seven unanswered points to lead 24-14. The home team was cheering them on as they took the game 25-15.

The 3rd game was actually competitive as Muckleshoot capitalized on a lackadaisical Lady Hawks squad that let their guard down. The score stayed tight going from 9-7 to 18-14 to 22-20 before Tulalip buckled down and won 25-22 to take the match 3 games to 0.

After the match, rookie head coach Meaghan Craig said, "There was a lot to like. We are learning new positions this year and some of the girls are rising to the occasion. Their communication continues to get better and they are doing a good job of reminding each other to hustle and be aggressive calling for the ball.

"As everyone saw tonight, after winning the first two games, we kind of let our guard down and allowed Muckleshoot to keep it close. But the girls stayed positive and battled back, which was good to see."

Power Outages

Sudden power outages can be frustrating and troublesome. Here are some tips to minimize loss and keep all members of your household as comfortable as possible. <https://www.ready.gov/power-outages>

Staying Safe Indoors

- Use flash lights in the dark, not candles.
- Eliminate unnecessary travel, especially by car. Traffic lights will be out and roads will be congested.
- If you are using a generator be sure you understand the risks of carbon monoxide poisoning and how to use generators safely.

Food Safety

- Keep refrigerator and freezer doors closed as much as possible. An unopened refrigerator will keep foods cold for about 4 hours. A full freezer will keep the temperature for about 48 hours (24 hours if it is half full) if the door remains closed.
- First use perishable food from the refrigerator. Perishables should have a temperature of 40 degrees Fahrenheit (4 degrees Celsius) or below to be safe to eat. Then use food from the freezer.
- Use your non-perishable foods and staples after using food from the refrigerator and freezer.
- If it looks like the power outage will continue beyond a day, prepare a cooler with ice for your freezer items.
- Keep food in a dry, cool spot and keep it covered at all times.

Electrical Equipment

- Turn off and unplug all unnecessary electrical equipment, including sensitive electronics.
- Turn off or disconnect any appliances (like stoves), equipment or electronics you were using when the power went out. When power comes back on, surges or spikes can damage equipment.
- Leave one light turned on so you'll know when the power comes back on.

Staying Safe After a Power Outage

- If electrical power lines are down, don't touch them. Keep your family and pets away. Report downed lines to your utility company.

Throw Out Unsafe Food

- Throw away any food (particularly meat, poultry, fish, eggs and leftovers) that has been exposed to temperatures higher than 40° F (4° C) for 2 hours or more, or that has an unusual odor, color or texture. When in doubt, throw it out!
- If food in the freezer is colder than 40° F and has ice crystals on it, you can refreeze it.

Earthquake Preparedness

Join Tulalip for the Great Washington ShakeOut at 10:17am, Oct. 17 and drop, cover & hold on. Practice builds muscle memory for when the next real earthquake hits.

Have No Fear! Halloween is Here

Halloween is one of the most anticipated nights of the year for kids. Keep kids safe by making sure they trick or treat with an adult if under the age 12, and that kiddos have flashlights or glow sticks to be more visible to motorists. Be safe & be seen!

Drive Safely as it gets Darker

Daylight Savings Time ends every year on the first Sunday in November. This means it starts to get darker earlier. Preparedness Tip: When you change your clocks backward by one hour, it's also a great time to check the batteries in your smoke alarms and carbon monoxide detectors.

Why Study Computer Science?

Submitted by Jeanne Steffener, Higher ED

Computer Science is a course of study which can provide you with the skills and knowledge to compete in a rapidly growing field of study. It is a field that has become an integral part of the world we live in, both at work and at home.

Having a degree in this field will provide you with an in-depth understanding of theories and emerging technologies. The knowledge and experience you gain during your school years will assist you in developing cutting edge solutions for today's many challenges.

If you take a more interdisciplinary track and combine computer science with other areas of interest such as biology, business, cybersecurity, engineering, information assurance, languages and linguistics, mathematics, physics, public policy, etc, you will be able to work on a larger range of complex issues.

There are many opportunities for computer scientists to focus on in the area of computer science. These categories consist of hardware, organization of data and information, interface and organization of systems, care of an organization's technology infrastructure, and developing complex software applications.

Computer science is a field in which your potential to evolve into other areas is huge. The skills you learn in computing can be applied in many other areas and will assist you as you evolve in your professional life. For instance, someone who is working in the area of software development could conceivably matriculate into a managerial position where you would have the opportunity combine your technical and managerial skills.

As an industry, computer science encourages the utilization of your creative side. This could mean, for example, creating a new appearance in a program or application, developing or improving function in a program or more logical, efficient hardware design. The key is innovation which reaps the benefits. A good example is Mark Zuckerberg, the creator of Facebook. He was able to take his computing and creativity skills and develop an application that billions of people globally are using today.

Computing can open up many opportunities that could have a positive impact on many lives. Consider this, computer technology is interconnected with the medical field, education, entertainment, architecture and even security. Like businesses, state and federal government offices rely heavily on computers. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, "computers help government workers to efficiently complete tasks, such as word processing, spreadsheets, and database management programs".

If you are interested in working in this fast paced realm of discovery, please call the Higher ED staff at 360-716-4888 or email us at highered@tulaliptribes-nsn.gov for assistance.
